New Safe for Building and Loan Co.

The Equitable Building and Loan Association have just purchased a new fire and burglar proof safe, which weighs 7,000 pounds. The safe is expected here in a few days. It will occupy an entire freight car in transit.

Two Deaths at Ormond.

Mrs. Harriet L. Scobie, wife of William Scobie, died at Ormond Tuesday morning and will be buried this afternoon at two o'clock. Mrs. Scobie was 67 years of age, and has been a resident of Ormond for many winters.

Charles Woodbury, aged about 75 years, died at Ormond Tuesday morning and was buried the same afternoon. Mr. Woodbury was one of the oldest residents of Ormond and lived on the peninsula south of the Bostrum place. James E. Andrews, a prominent attorney at Fort Pierce, was his son-in-law.

Death of Mrs. E. C. Jacobs.

The many Daytona friends of Mrs. E. C. Jacobs will regret to learn of her death, which occurred at her home in Cincinnati, Ohio, Monday evening.

Mrs. Jacobs was seventy-six years of age, and has been a constant winter visitor to Daytona for the past ten years.

She was the mother of Mrs. L. M. Waite of this city. Mrs. Waite was at the bedside of her mother when the Grim Reaper called the aged lady to the world beyond.

The Fire Ordinance Again Claims the Attention of Council. Other Important Matters Discussed.

The City Council met in regular session Monday evening.

The usual routine bills were presented and ordered paid, after which the city legislature took up more important matters.

The fire ordinance as passed at the last regular meeting was returned by Mayor Smith with his veto. The entire matter was turned over to the ordinance committee and they were instructed to draw up a new ordinance and present it at the next regular meeting.

Treasurer Peck and Clerk Wilkinson made their reports, which were accepted.

The city is planning on opening a new set of books as outlined by Mr. Hutchinson, of Jacksonville, and the clerk was ordered to take up the matter of getting the necessary books.

The Daytona Furniture Company submitted a communication relative to jail beds, which was read.

A petition from S. B. Green asking permission to store water tanks on the parkage was tabled.

B. F. Hough presented a petition asking the city fathers to appropriate $20.00 for material for an electric light line along Cottage avenue, the line and lights to be maintained by the residents of the avenue. The request was granted.

The city physician, Dr. H. H. Seelye, made his report, which showed the health of the city to be excellent.

J. A. Hendricks was granted permission to lay a sewer from his beach street property to deep water in the Halifax river.

A number of bids for constructing sidewalks were received and referred to City Engineer Rogers, and he was instructed to confer with the bidders and ascertain if they thoroughly understood the specifications. The council then adjourned.

VOYAGE OF THE KINGFISHER.

Do you ever get tired doing the same thing day by day? Well that is the way we felt. There were three of us, to-wit; a Deacon, a Major and a plain, ordinary civilian. So wishing to break the monotony of every day life, we decided to take a trip.

Where should we go, that was the next question? The Inlet? (good fishing) Smith Creek? (good fishing) Bulow? (good fishing and a possible turkey.) Bulow? Oh that's the place, good fishing, deer, turkey and an occasional bear. So we decided on Bulow.

The Deacon supplied the launch, the Major and the Civilian put up sufficient grub to last until the turkey, deer, bear and other game were captured in sufficient quantity to supply the wants of three big eaters.

Up the Halifax we went, past Ormond, past the mouth of the Tomoka, and then we turned into one of the prettiest pieces of scenery which it has ever been my lot to see.

There is a narrow channel of about fifty feet; and up this went the launch, turning and winding and twisting, heading to all points of the compass; now almost scraping the semi-tropical foliage of the north or south bank. You see the Deacon ran the engine, and when that compact piece of machinery did not require his attention he was busy thinking out complex problems about the church, and as for the Major he was looking for duck and held a gun, but the other lobe of his brain was at work on a very complicated battalion movement, and as for the Civilian, well he was steering (no wonder we scraped the bank.)

"Look there!" exclaimed the pilot, and we all rubbered, and just under a clump of bushes there was a large alligator. The Major re-loaded his gun with a heavier shot, the engineer reversed the gear and we went back to capture him. We had his hide parceled out; it was to be divided into two suit cases and three pocket books. But alas for human aspirations, on our return to the spot the 'gator had disappeared. All our beautiful dreams of pocket books and suit cases vanished into mummy water.

So we proceeded on our journey up the river. On each side could be seen the beautiful palmetto, the ever green cedar and the moss-draped live oak. Every now and then the water would be disturbed by a ripple caused from the playful jumping of a school of mullet.

About noon, as we were getting a little hungry, the Deacon proposed that we stop at the next high ground and camp. A delightful spot was soon found near the ruins of the old Bulow homestead. While the Major and Deacon pitched the tent the Civilian lit a fire and cooked dinner, (chili-con-carne) that was the name of the mixture when it was finished.

After enjoying a good (?) dinner we proceeded to look for game and fish in which pursuit we spent a strenuous afternoon. The two fishermen caught one fish and the hunter after firing eighteen shells returned to camp with a blue jay which he had killed by accident.

Then we cooked up some more canned stuff, had plenty of good coffee, and lay back watching the dying embers. The aroma of good tobacco, good stories and the quiet of the evening made us all supremely contented.

Then as the silvery moon struggled up through the palmettos, and a solemn stillness appeared to creep over the camp, broken now and then by the splash of a fish or the rustle of a leaf, we sat there and listened. Far off could be heard the murmur of the ocean, which proved a soothing song to woo us to the gentle arms of Morpheus.

The next day was one of unalloyed enjoyment. The Major and the Civilian hunted and the Deacon fished. After a good dinner of fresh caught fish, potatoes and coffee, we all started up the river trolling from the launch. Winding and twisting again between the palmetto and oak-bordered banks we came to a delightful spot, cast anchor and fished for some hours. The brim, fresh water bass and mud fish, were quite plentiful and full of life, giving us good sport.

Now and then a lazy 'gator would blink his eye and disappear before we could shoot. To illustrate the beauty of the scenery at one spot we counted twenty-seven different colors including every shade of green imaginable. These beautiful tints were reflected in the exact reversed picture by the mirror-like water of the river.

We returned to camp with lots of fish and a good appetite. Spent another pleasant evening around the camp fire and after the rising of the moon, we rolled up in our blankets and were soon asleep. The next morning we hunted and fished with plenty of fish, but our dreams of turkey and deer were doomed to disappointment.

Taking his gun in the afternoon the Civilian set out through the woods leaving the Deacon and the Major to fish. You know it does one good to get off in the woods alone and think once in a while. Going into the pine forest some distance, sitting on a fallen log and listening to the forest sounds, one is impressed with the mystery of nature. Truly Longfellow must have been in this forest or one very much like it when he wrote:

"This is the forest primeval.
"The murmuring pines and the hemlocks
"Bearded with moss and in garments green, indistinct in the twilight,
"Stand like Druids of old with voices sad and prophetic,
"Stand like harpies hoar with beards that rest on their bosoms.
"Loud, from their rocky caverns, the deep-voiced neighboring ocean speaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the forest."

Returning again to camp, we sat down to the more prosaic things of life in the way of pork and beans.

The next day we broke up the encampment, returning down the winding river to the headwaters of the Halifax. After a few hours run with a fair wind and an ebb tide, the launch gave up its cargo of three hungry, but supremely happy campers, who will always recommend a trip up the river to their over-worked friends in Daytona.

How a German Baby is Swathed. Of all housewives in Europe probably the German is the hardest worked, and of all European mothers the German practices most completely the art of swathing and padding her baby and of putting it on the shelf. The German baby is swaddled in a long, narrow pillow, which is made to meet completely round him, being tucked up over his feet and turned under his solemn chin. Three bands of gray blue ribbons are then passed round the whole bundle and tied in large, florid bows about where his chest, his waist and his ankles may be supposed to be.

In this guise he can be deposited as an ornament either on the sumptuous bed or on the kitchen dresser or on the drawing room table. How fond the Germans are of this presentment of baby may be guessed from the fact that it figures largely in their picture books, among their dolls and even in the bakers' shops at Easter time, made of dough and covered with sugar, to be devoured by greedy live babies.—Strand Magazine.

Looks After the Cents. A simple illustration will show the care that is taken of cents by one of the big banks of Chicago. Stamped postal cards are not used, and not one of the thousands of routine letters that are written every day is stamped or sealed until the whole routine mail of the day is assembled in the afternoon. Then all the cards and letters to one correspondent are put in a single envelope, and, except for letters from the officers and the like, the bank comes as near as possible to get its entire mail carried at 2 cents an ounce or a cent for every postal card instead of often paying 2 cents for a quarter of an ounce, as it would have to do if every communication were sealed and stamped separately. This little matter of getting full value out of a two cent stamp makes a saving of from $25 to $30 a day.—World's Work.

An Ibsen Theory. In one of the published letters of Ibsen he says that while he was writing one of his plays he had on his desk an empty ash glass with a scorpion in it. Now and then the animal would grow sick, and the author would throw a piece of soft fruit to it, whereupon the scorpion would fall upon the food furiously, empty its poison into it and then get well again. "Is it not a good deal like this with us poets?" Ibsen continues. "Nature's laws apply in the domain of the spirit also."

A Long Sentence of Six Letters. Here is a sentence of thirty-two words which some ingenious person has constructed of the six letters found in the word "maladen": "Ida, a maiden; a mean man named Ned Dean, and Media, a mad dame, made me mend a die and dine and mind a mine in a dim den in Malue."

Beliefs About Waves. The Persians believe that the waves of the Persian gulf are caused by air entering caves which have subterranean outlets under the ocean. One of the most curious beliefs of all—one closely akin to a certain ancient oriental belief—is that of the south sea islanders. According to their notion, the rolling of the sea is caused by a "thunder god." In old times this "thunder god" killed the chief deity of the islands and was confined under the ocean as a punishment. His rolling with rage causes the waves.

Musical Fish of Ceylon. Every bay and inlet on the coast of Ceylon abounds with musical fish. Their song, if it can be called a song, is not one sustained note like a bird's, but a multitude of tiny, soft, sweet sounds, each clear and distinct in itself, something like the vibrations of a wireless when its rim is rubbed with the moistened finger. In the harbor at Bombay, India, there is a fish with a song like the sound produced by an aeolian harp.

One Qualification. "Yes, my boy's got a position in a bank, and he's going to be president of that institution some day."
"Bright, eh?"
"Well, sir, he can sign his name so that no one can possibly make out the signature."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dividing the Task. Lottie—Oh, well—let's kiss and make up. Dottie—All right, dear. I'll do the kissing, but you've had more experience with the other part of the programme.—Cleveland Leader.

Interesting Incidents of a Hunting Trip to the Headwaters of the Halifax

JOHN V. COLCLOUGH.

That morning I had been adopted as a member by the Christian church one hour it seemed to be long, yet the ecclesiastical authorities inflicted it for comparatively trivial offenses, and several councils subsequently attempted to suppress it. The thirteenth canon of the council of Toledo, in 680, deprived bishops and priests of the right of mutilating the servants of the church. The sixth canon of the council of Toledo, in 680, forbidding bishops to exercise exclusive jurisdiction in offenses involving the capital penalty, also interdicted them from ordering mutilation of the limbs, even in the case of their own sons, and ordained that bishops violating this law should be deposed, excommunicated and denied the last rites of the church when in articulo mortis. The eighteenth canon of the council of Frankfurt, in 794, forbade abbots to blind or mutilate their monks whatever might be the offense.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Fishing Frog. The fishing frog buries himself in the mud and lies partly concealed in weeds, where, with his huge mouth open, he fishes for his dinner. On the back of his head there are three spines, the longest of which he bends forward in front of his mouth, gently swaying it in the water. At last it attracts a young fish, which makes a spring for the supposed worm, when—snap—the mouth is closed and Mr. Fishing Frog has had his dinner. The archer fish catches his dinner in quite a different way. Just out of his reach on the leaf of a plant growing on the river's brink rests a fly, basking in the sunlight. Suddenly a little stream of water strikes it; it loses its balance and falls, only to be caught by the cunning little archer below.—Field and Stream.
